

EVA CREBOLDER

Eva Crebolder: Cookingplate Tiles, 2016/2017, grey and white porcelain tiles, 10 x 10 cm

- Price: 140 euro for set of 9 tiles (inc. 6% btw).

Eva Crebolder mostly works with reliefs in ceramic, that stand out through their understated, abstract and subtle character; Brics are capped with a small roof, unfolding dimes are combined into an abacus. A 'cookingplate' is abstracted into a tile with a cross and a round center.

The artistic basis of Eva Crebolder is what's special in everyday things and life. Elements from daily life return in a playful surprising way, presented in a new size, scale and/or form. She creates rhythmic patterns, juxtapositions of repetitive movements, purposefully allowing room for slight deviations. Being handmade, her tiles and reliefs always consciously show irregularities. Failure becomes an important asset. The implicit imperfections of the human hand are accepted and embraced. Crebolder's work breathes through subtle nuances in colour and patterns. The cool and hard groundmaterial seems warmed and softened with humor, elegance and grace.

Eva Crebolder studied at the Gerrit Rietveld Academy, Amsterdam and at the School of Visual Art and Hunter College in New York. She enjoys working in public and private commissions. Her work balances between design and art and can be acquired in unique or in small, limited editions. Since 2015, Eva Crebolder participated in several Cityscapes Exhibitions: Inner City (2016), Rhizome BWH 2.0 (2017) and the annual Summer in the City exhibitions of 2015 and 2016.

For the Cityscapes Friends Editions 2017 Eva Crebolder made a series of nine 'Cookingplate Tiles' (10x10 cm). The set of tiles is produced in a small edition in China and can be acquired in white or grey.
